We’re here to level the playing field of mental health globally by harnessing the power of sport-based therapy.
A NOTE FROM DAVID

This past year has been a significant moment in the history of global mental health. The pandemic has exacerbated mental health needs for children and adults across the world, but simultaneously, global attention has begun to take a closer look at the importance of proper mental healthcare. As people are becoming increasingly aware of mental health challenges, Doc Wayne consistently strives to be available to youth in need of support.

We continue to receive more requests for partnership than we have the capacity to accept, but we are making every effort to sustainably increase the size of our organization and the reach of our programs. While our direct service work in Boston continues to serve as our “sandbox” for learning about the mental health needs expressed by youth, The Champions Network™ is a platform where we can continue adapting to these challenges and prepare adults with the skills to support children in need across the globe.

Recovering from over a year of lockdown proved to be a new challenge for our coaches and their clients to adapt to. At the start of the school year, our coaches reported that many students were almost two years delayed in their social-emotional development as a result of two years in social isolation. This trend is consistent with data suggesting that we are in the midst of a mental health emergency, particularly among youth.

This is why Doc Wayne’s community-based model is so essential—now more than ever. Because of the hard work and determination of our staff, Doc Wayne is well-positioned to address this crisis with the combination of therapy and sport. Through the efforts of our staff and our international partners, we are confident we can level the playing field of mental health globally.
The focus on preventative services to universally teach socioemotional skills to all students in a setting turned our attention to building our capacity to deliver the therapeutic recess program across four schools in FY22. The program goal is to ensure that recess is an inclusive space where any student can play in ways that strengthen their relationships to self, peers, and to caring adults. Children communicate through play, and recess is a critical part of a student’s day when facilitated space can help deliver social-emotional skills such as conflict resolution and teach empathy and responsible decision-making through trusting relationships.

The pandemic exposed already worrying trends of increased rates of depression and anxiety among children and adolescents that spanned decades and fueled the need for urgent mental health care for youth in crisis. As children continue to make up for opportunities lost due to the pandemic, we bear witness to their resilience and a strong sense of hope that they will rebound from the challenges. We must not let them down and continue to engage in conversations aimed at effecting change at the systems and policy level to make mental health care more accessible for all.

Doc Wayne has been a key member of the Surround Care Coalition since its inception in 2019. Doc Wayne’s work to reimagine mental health and wellness through the lens of sports and physical activities in our partner schools have supported children and their families to overcome mental health challenges.

Children enjoy group and individual activities without realizing they are receiving mental health services and most importantly staying active and having fun! Doc Wayne’s presence in the schools has been especially important as children, families and educators try to recover from the three-year long disruption of COVID-19. We look forward to many more years of collaboration with Doc Wayne.

STRONGER INTERPERSONAL RELATIONSHIPS
One student in particular historically struggled to navigate peer relationships and presented as quiet and shy. Through his participation with Doc Wayne in recess and Chalk Talk® groups, he has now emerged as a leader in the group. He has developed a stronger voice to advocate for himself and his peers!

The last year has proved that a mental health overhaul is necessary. Through education and advocacy, we can create the systemic change needed across the global landscape of mental health. As the Champions Network™ moved into our second year, the increased number of partnerships and requests was astounding. Throughout the year, we navigated growing and building out the Champions Network™ through the addition of new team members and technology while fielding a growing roster of opportunities. Our team met the needs of so many through generous donors, funding, and resilience. This perseverance ultimately moves us toward our goal of one million youth impacted by Doc Wayne.

A significant highlight of the year was meeting our long-time partner FEBA (Far East Basketball Association), on the field in Nairobi, Kenya. While visiting their facilities, we heard from trained Doc Wayne coaches, community members like teachers and parents, and the youth. The first-hand accounts of positive change and success stories for students and adults were abundant. Notably, we heard from teachers who found that students in the FEBA program had increased interest in academics and interpersonal relationships. The need for accessible mental health care is great, and with your support, our team has risen to meet the demand. Learn more about our visit with FEBA here.

We look forward to the coming year in which the reach of Doc Wayne grows in our efforts to utilize sport-based therapy for learners across the globe.
The clients have taught each other different ways to strengthen their skills, increase in teamwork skills, [better] communication, positive collaboration and how to be there for one another.

CREATING CHAMPIONS™ TRAINING; LEVEL 1

Adapted from our award-winning sport-based group therapy program, Chalk Talk®

Specifically for younger clients while reflecting the skills present in our Creating Champions™ curriculum

Engages young learners through sports and therapeutic games to teach them social-emotional learning skills

Doc Wayne’s proprietary junior curriculum is for learners aged 5 to 8.

OUTCOMES

"Clients [youth] that often struggle during a physical group have developed into the leadership role and have helped others when they are struggling. There was a client that struggled with sharing and would run-off and take the ball, now I see him playing and sharing with others."

COACH PERSPECTIVE

40 staff were trained in Creating Champions™ and Rookie Pride™, impacting an estimated 650+ youth.

THE VILLAGE FOR FAMILIES & CHILDREN GREATER HARTFORD, CT.

The Village was one of the first agencies in the country to provide homes for neglected children. They continue to achieve our mission “to build a community of strong, healthy families who protect and nurture children” by providing a full range of behavioral health, early childhood, and youth development, substance use treatment, and support services for children, adults, and families in the Greater Hartford, Connecticut region.

During my tenure as Chairperson of the Board of Directors, I have had the privilege of watching Doc Wayne grow from a small, two-staff member organization working with only dozens of young people into a financially sustainable and maturing organization, with nearly 50 “game changers,” helping hundreds of young people across the globe.

While our work is challenging, it is groundbreaking and exciting. I’m proud to be affiliated with this incredible group of professionals working hard to “level the playing field” for young people struggling with mental health. Our team of coaches are the most committed clinicians working in the mental health space and live our mission and values each and every day. Witnessing the growth of this team and participating in the development of our Board of Directors under the careful direction of our incredible Chief Executive Officer, David Cohen, has been one of the greatest honors of my professional career.

Our work is especially important in this post-COVID era as the shroud of denial and silence often surrounding the mental health crisis has been lifted, and youth and their families desire access to our unique sport-based therapy more than ever. While my time as Board Chair may be ending, I look forward to the next chapter of serving the Board of Directors of Doc Wayne and aiding in ways I can to help fuel our continued growth and success.

LOOKING FORWARD TO MANY MORE YEARS ON TEAM DOC WAYNE,
CHRISTOPHER S. ERNEST, CPA, MSM
